Following is the poem composed and dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. Hasenjaeger by Mrs. Frank Kohlhaugen:

Another year of wedded life,
You have passed "Dear Friends", to day,
And as a tribute of respect,
I offer you this lay.

Time was when you two together,
Found joy in any kind of weather,
If the earth was clothed in bloom or snow

Or the bleak cold winds did blow,
It mattered not, if you two were to gether

Just, you two, together.

Then the scene was changed,
And God to you did send
Some babies sweet,
Your joy could find no end,

For thus your home was made complete.

But not for long, this joy did last,
For, God who chastises those he loves
Did send His Angel, to transplant
Those wee small flowers to Heaven above.

Once more you two, were left alone,
Just you two alone, together.

But, God in his infinite wisdom,
Again your home did bless,
With sons, and daughters and,
Thus alleviate your distress,

So time went on, year in year out,
The joys of life together you did share,
Sometimes with clouds ore' cast,
Sometimes with weather fair.

And now you have come, to the evening of life,
And are nearing the end of life's perilous strife,
May God whom you have served
here below,

Be your guide and companion as toward Heaven you go.

Orland PTA Has Profitable Meeting

The February meeting of the Orland P. T. A., held last Thursday evening proved to be a very interesting as well as instructive meeting. Owing to the absence of the president, Mrs. L. H. Arnold, the task of conducting the meeting fell upon the shoulders of Mrs. Lillian Knox, vice-president, who proved herself a very capable executive and dispatched the routine business of the evening in an efficient manner.

Owing to a request from the Regional Director of the Rural Health Service, it will be necessary to change the hours of the monthly Welfare Clinic from a morning to an afternoon session and it will probably necessitate the holding of the clinic in the school basement instead of the upstairs classroom which has been used for this purpose heretofore.

A program by the pupils of the upper grade room under the capable direction of Miss Van Camp was excellently presented and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. A group of songs by the boys of the room and another group by the girls were delightfully rendered. A pleasing and instructive innovation called "A Lesson in Geography" proved a source of much favorable comment. This was in the form of a stereopticon travelogue. An excellent set of slides depicting scenes and places of interest in the British Isles had been secured by Miss Van Camp and as the successive views were thrown upon the screen, a round robin lecture, participated in by every member of the class, explained and amplified each view. This was exceedingly interesting as well as immensely instructive to everyone.

At the recent Blue Island District Council Meeting of the P. T. A. held at the Whittier School Gymnasium in Blue Island, Orland Park P. T. A. was represented by Mrs. L. H. Arnold, Mrs. Sherman S. Knox, Mrs. Ray Doctor and Mrs. Earl Reish. They report having had an enjoyable as well as instructive evening.

The March meeting will be the annual meeting of the organization at which time it will be necessary to select a new president and a new treasurer. President Arnold has selected a nominating committee consisting of Mrs. Emma Burkhardt, Mrs. Ray Doctor and Mrs. Hazel Mohr to report on a selection of candidates for these offices.

Following the meeting a St. Patrick's Day program will be given and everyone is urged to attend.

Orland Fire Dept., Called to 95th St. Fire

The Orland Park Fire Department was called to a fire at 95th street and 88th avenue last Saturday night, nine miles from Orland Park. Sparks from a burning building were threatening a large dance hall and roadhouse.

When the Orland Park department arrived they found the fire department from Oak Lawn, Willow Springs, Evergreen Park and Worth also on the scene. The fire was soon under control, so the Orland firemen did not get into action.

Tinley In Concerted Action For School Aid

A concerted action is being taken by many school districts thruout the state to petition the legislature to enact legislation that will help the various school districts to get out of the red and to make it possible to pay the teachers and help keep the public schools open. On Wednesday night the various civic organizations of Tinley Park met with the local Board of Education to discuss the passing of resolutions along the line of the following resolution as passed by the local Board of Education, urging the state officials to do something quick in the school situation. The resolution is as follows:

WHEREAS, due to the delay in the extension of tax levies and the failure to collect the normal percentage of taxes, the board of 146 of this school district is now and for sometime past has been unable to pay its teachers, janitors and other employees or the business houses which have in the past furnished fuel and supplies to this district except in tax anticipation warrants, and

WHEREAS, there is no adequate market for such tax anticipation warrants except such market as is maintained by unscrupulous brokers or other persons who have and are taking advantage of the situation to such an extent that in some instances they are offering to pay less than 50 percent of the face value of such warrants which offer has been from time to time accepted by certain of such teachers, janitors and business houses because of their desperate financial need, and

WHEREAS, the teachers, janitors employees and business houses rendering service and furnishing fuel and supplies to the district, are in such desperate financial condition that in many cases they are unable to obtain funds for proper food, living quarters or transportation and are therefore unable to continue to render service or furnish fuel and supplies and accept tax anticipation warrants in payment, and

WHEREAS, there is grave danger that unless immediate steps are taken to furnish financial assistance to this district it will become necessary to close the school or schools of the district and deprive the school children of this school district of an adequate education.

NOW THEREFORE it is hereby resolved by the Board of Education of 146 School District, Cook County, as follows:

Section 1—That this board hereby finds that the teachers, janitors and employees of this board are in such acute financial distress that they soon will be unable to perform their duties to the benefit of the school population of this district and that the business houses which have heretofore furnished fuel and supplies to this district, are no longer able to furnish fuel or supplies unless this board can pay cash for such services, fuel and supplies and unless an adequate market is maintained for the tax anticipation warrants of this board.

Section 2—That unless immediate financial assistance is rendered to this board or to the teachers, janitors, employees and other creditors of this board, there is grave danger that the school or schools of this district will soon have to be closed.

Section 3—That it is the duty of this school board to acquaint the executives and legislative representatives of the United States of America and State of Illinois with the educational and financial conditions of this school district and to request said executive and legislative representatives to furnish immediate financial assistance to this district, its teachers, employees and creditors so that this district may continue to furnish adequate educational opportunities to this school district and same may be improved and maintained. We also suggest that you amend Sec. 210, 211 and 211a so as to provide $30 per pupil as a basis for state aid claims instead of $9 per pupil. This will practically reduce our local district tax 50 per cent or more for educational purposes. By increasing

RUNS STOP SIGN AND THREE CARS PILE UP

Three automobiles were damaged in an auto accident at the intersection of Wolf road and 159th street in Orland Township about 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Wm. Hentsch, Jr., with a young lady from Goodings Grove was driving west on 159th street in a Chevrolet and had the right of way.

A Pontiac driven by George Peklo of 2538 South Kedvale ave., Chicago was the cause of the triple pileup, when Peklo ran thru a stop sign at the 159 street intersection and ran in front of the Chevrolet driven by Hentsch. The force of impact spun the Pontiac car around. It struck a Ford standing on the Wolf road facing south waiting for Mr. Hentsch. Isaac Goodman of Goodings Grove was the driver of the Ford and was bruised about the head.

All the cars in the triple crash were damaged. The Chevrolet was quite badly damaged as also was the Pontiac. Both cars were taken to the Mokena Motor Sales Garage.

The County highway police of Cook County were on the scene of the accident shortly after the crash happened.

ILLINOIS
STATE NEWS

Judge Joseph M. Burke in the Cook County Circuit court issued a permanent injunction restraining the city of Chicago from continuing to dump garbage and refuse in the old Illinois and Michigan canal, in the suit filed by the state department of public works. The use of the free canal dumping grounds has saved the city about $200,000 since the practice was begun.

Warrants were issued in Edwardsville against Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, forty-three, Granite City, and Thomas Lehne, forty-three, former Venice policeman, charging them with the murder of her husband, William Puhse, January 24, while he was asleep. Application for the warrants was made by State's Attorney Lester Geers before Justice of the Peace Daily after the defendants made statements implicating themselves, according to authorities. They are held without bond.

Sheriff Albert C. Davis of Perry county enlisted the assistance of officers in neighboring southern Illinois counties in the search for Joe and Fred Anderson, Chicago youths who escaped from the county jail at Pinckneyville. The boys were being held for the grand jury on a charge of robbing a beer parlor in Duquoin. The prisoners tore off a cell door in the jail and dug a hole through the wall. An auto awaited them nearby.

Samuel Mele, nineteen years old, Chicago Heights, did not move quickly enough when two robbers entered the Phillips gasoline station at Twenty-third street and East End avenue, Chicago Heights. One of the pair fired, inflicting a flesh wound in Mele's neck. After taking $5 from the cash register the bandits kidnaped the attendant, Louis Baron, and forced him to ride with them to Richton Park, where he was released.

The machinery by which the federal Agricultural Adjustment administration hopes to bring about smoother operation of the milk and cream industry of the Chicago region was set in motion by Frank C. Baker. The mechanism consists chiefly of a license, issued by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, which requires every distributor of milk to pay at least 3.8 cents a quart ($1.75 a hundred pounds) for all milk sold in Chicago, and suburban markets as such, and at least 2.7 cents a quart for all milk from which cream is extracted. No attempt to fix retail prices of milk or its products is being made.

State Treasurer John C. Martin announced that his office received $13,749,783.57 during January, paid out $12,929,171.01, and had a treasury balance of $35,591,936.01 on February 1. Included in the month's receipts were $1,750,000 in tax anticipation notes issued against future collection of taxes. Martin's report showed that the retail sales tax was the largest source of revenue, producing $4,436,352.23. Other levies contributed to the state treasury during January as follows: Direct property tax, $1,329,553.91; inheritance tax, $253,275.87; beverage (beer) tax, $71,115.40; insurance, corporation and others, $162,714.75; motor fuel tax, $2,375,749.35; motor vehicle tax, $2,863,969.20. Miscellaneous fees, earnings and refunds brought in $254,723.23; federal aid, $142,239.12, and trust funds, $79,109.82.

Machir J. Dorsey, once wealthy promoter of life insurance companies, and three co-defendants, Edwin Hult, C. Edwin Johnson and Harry W. Huttig, were found guilty by a jury in Chicago of conspiracy to loot the treasuries of the Security Life Insurance company of Chicago and the Northern States Life Insurance company of Hammond. Two other defendants were acquitted by the jury. They are Attorney John H. S. Lee, associate in the law firm of former Senator Charles S. Deneen, and Bertram Day of Indianapolis, president of the Northern States Life Insurance company. The jury fixed the punishment of M. J. Dorsey and E. Hult at the maximum, one to five years in the penitentiary. The jury made no recommendation, however, on the penalties to be imposed on the other two convicted defendants.

Under a ruling by Ernest Palmer, Illinois director of insurance, fictitious automobile fleet insurance is barred in this state. He has made public a letter sent to all insurers writing automobile insurance in Illinois, announcing that no fleet policy may be written where there are less than five cars nor where the insured cars are not owned by the same individual, partnership or corporation and used chiefly in his business. Under Mr. Palmer's order, employees' cars may not be insured under the fleet policy of the employer unless they are actually used in the business of the employer and unless he pays the actual cost of operation while the car is so used.

Jo and James Azar, brothers, were found guilty in Harrisburg of arson, having been charged with burning their store in 1932.

Postmaster General Farley named the following acting postmasters for Illinois: Harry Stephens, Ashley; M. J. Sullivan, Bradwood; John Gleason, Crete; Alfred J. Geiseman, Shannon, and Ed W. Galloway, Shawneetown.

Russell W. Cafferty, thirty-six, Burlington railroad repairman, died in Galesburg from a revolver wound. Police said he was despondent because of trouble with his wife. He died on the front porch of her home after she had refused him admittance.

All forms of gambling in Blue Island were ordered stopped by Mayor Frank Kastien.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER GOES HOME WITH A SAD HEART

PETER RABBIT held his breath. He didn't know that he was holding it, but he was. Perhaps you have done that same thing when you were very much excited. Most everybody does. Would Nimbleheels succeed in getting away from Hooty the Owl? Peter couldn't be sure, but it seemed that Hooty had barely missed the last time he struck. And Peter was sure that the jumps of Nimbleheels were growing shorter. The wonderful little jumper was growing tired. Peter felt sure of it. How could it be otherwise?

Peter Was Sure That the Jumps of Nimbleheels Were Growing Shorter.

How Peter did wish that he hadn't asked Nimbleheels to show him how he could jump.

"It's all my fault," thought Peter. "If Hooty does catch Nimbleheels I shall blame myself as long as I live. Yes, I will. It is my fault, it is all my fault. They are getting nearer the Brier Patch, but I'm afraid they won't get there in time. Oh dear! Oh dear!"

For the time being Peter forgot that he himself was anything but safe sitting out there on the Green Meadows in the moonlight. His whole thought was for little Nimbleheels who was so bravely jumping for his life.

Every once in a while the sharp snap of Hooty's bill would reach Peter and send little shivers up and down his back. He had heard the snap of that bill before more than once, and never without shivering.

Presently a dark cloud passed over the moon just as Hooty made an unusually quick turn and struck more fiercely than ever at poor little Nimbleheels. A Black Shadow hid them for a minute or two, and though Peter strained his eyes he couldn't see what was happening. When Black Shadow had passed on and the Green Meadows were once more flooded with moonlight Peter stared eagerly at the spot where he had last seen Nimbleheels and Hooty. Neither was to be seen.

Hastily Peter looked this way and that way. Disappearing toward the Green Forest he saw what looked like a floating shadow. It wasn't a shadow. Peter had seen it too often to be fooled even for a minute. It was Hooty the Owl. Peter's heart sank.

"Hooty is going home to the Green Forest, so he must have caught Nimbleheels last time," thought Peter sadly. "He caught little Nimbleheels and now he is taking him home for dinner. Poor little Nimbleheels. And it was my fault. It certainly was my fault. If I had not wanted to see him jump he would have been content to stay in the dear Old Brier Patch, and then this couldn't have happened."

Peter turned toward the Brier Patch and hurried home, lippy-lippy-lip. He felt that the Green Meadows were not a safe place for him that night. And as he crept under his favorite bramble bush his heart was heavy with sadness. Life seemed a terrible thing. Somehow the moonlight no longer seemed so beautiful. Peter sighed heavily for he was very, very sad. Then he sighed again.

"What's the matter with you? Have you a pain?" asked a thin, high squeaky voice that sounded most familiar. Peter jumped as if he had sat on a brier.

A Little Garden

By ANNE CAMPBELL

SHE has a little garden
Upon her window sill,
She waters it at evening
When all the world is still;
A narrow box of beauty
That holds the humblest blooms,
And yet it feeds a spirit
That lives in little rooms.

There is no sweeping vista
To bless her city eyes.
The walls are thick around her.
They shut away the skies.
But souls that crave the woodlands
Must have a bit of green,
And so above her garden,
The neighbors see her lean.

She has a little garden
As lovely to her sight,
As are the flowering acres
That grow for your delight;
And in the dewy twilight;
When pale stars shine above,
I know God gives her garden
The blessing of his love!

fessor Wheeler of Harvard recently before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Oh, yes, Professor Wheeler is himself of the masculine gender! He is just broad-minded and modest, when in these words he attributes the world's troubles entirely to men:

"Throughout the ages the aggressiveness, curiosity, unstable intelligence, contentiousness and other antisocial tendencies which the male had inherited from his ancestors have kept society in a constant turmoil."

But before we succumb entirely to the professor's blandishments, let him finish:

"But without him there would be no progress! If this were a woman's world, peace and order would reign, but society would make no advances! It is the restless, dominance impulses of the male that furnish the necessary stimulus to progress. Female societies are harmonious, but incapable of further development. They remain stationary!"

When a man admits the superiority of the "weaker sex" in any way, one might know there is a catch to it somewhere!

"Peace and order but no progress"—indeed! Well, professor, we don't mind that at all. In fact we're quite willing to stand by your estimate of the effect of the two sexes on the world. We're perfectly willing to accept peace and order for our part. Only we can't quite figure out what you mean by "progress" and "advancement." How can there be progress without order? The history of the world and its strife and turmoil and man-made wars tells the story. It was in the peaceful intervals that the progress was made.

Very good, professor—you tell about the influence of women. We're perfectly willing to have it your way!

Why the Sudden
Change to Liquid
Laxatives?

Doctors have always recognized the value of the laxative whose dose can be measured, and whose action can be thus regulated to suit individual need.

The public, too, is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that a properly prepared liquid laxative brings a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a prescription, and is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is at all druggists. Member N. R. A.

DISAPPOINTMENT

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

ALYSE knew she shouldn't have come. She was at once glad and afraid.

It seemed somehow like a dream; incredible. Something she had longed for all her life, yet never believed would happen.

Ross Carthage sat at her elbow. His arm touched hers. Yet it was the proximity of him, the power of his personality, rather than the physical contact that electrified her.

He was a glamorous figure, glamorous and romantic.

In this she had not been disappointed.

Long, long ago—it seemed like ages, though was in reality a mere ten months—she had sat in an audience in a great auditorium and heard him play.

And today more than ever a sensation.

He was young and handsome and tall and slim.

He had poise and personality and charming manners.

In fact the man possessed everything that you would expect to find in a brilliant young artist—everything that a girl like Alyse, who was younger still and demurely beautiful, longed to find.

His meeting had been quite by chance.

Alyse, herself a student of piano, had been invited to attend an informal gathering at the apartment of Monty Blair.

Monty knew everyone, and he never threw a party without inviting and introducing some great celebrity, which feature of his affairs was always a delight to the regular guests. And on this night the guest of honor had been Ross Carthage.

Alyse had danced with the great artist, and later she had spent an hour in a secluded corner talking with him, or rather she had sat there with an enraptured look on her face while Carthage talked.

And now, only a week later, she was going with him to his apartment.

There would be no one else there.

They would be alone; Ross had promised to play for her.

It was an old trick. Alyse knew it was an old trick.

The famous artist inveigling the demure and pretty young girl to his apartment on the pretext of displaying his talents for her special benefit.

Alyse shuddered slightly at the thought.

She was afraid, yet she was glad she had agreed to come.

It was a brand new experience, the sort of experience that every girl ought to have in order to get along in the world.

She wasn't fool enough to let herself believe that Ross Carthage was interested in her alone, that there hadn't been other girls.

She knew his game, understood his purpose.

Whatever happened was the result of her own doing.

The limousine drew to a stop before an apartment house.

A footman opened the door.

Ross Carthage, smiling that whimsical smile of his that had been the means of bringing hundreds of women to his feet, helped her to the street.

They entered the elevator and were whisked to an upper floor.

Ross led the way to a door in the main corridor, unlocked it, stepped aside and allowed her to enter.

Alyse's little gasp of delight was genuine.

She hadn't believed that apartments like this existed outside of books.

If, in a moment of day dreaming, she had ever allowed her imagination to conjure up a picture of an idealistic abode, the result would not have equaled this reality.

Nothing was overdone; nowhere was there an addition of gaudiness or incongruity.

The appointments and arrangements of rooms were, in the finest sense of the word, the work of an artist.

Alyse turned at last and saw Ross standing there at her elbow, looking down at her, smiling.

She remembered then where she was and what was before her.

For one fleeting instant she fought a desire to turn and leave the place, ashamed of her own audacity.

But the impulse passed.

She surrendered her wrap and, striving mightily to present a casual attitude, made herself comfortable on the long divan before the open grate.

Carthage went to a cabinet and produced bottles and glasses.

He mixed drinks and talked to her of commonplace things.

And then at last they had drunk their toast and looked into each other's eyes, and the evening had begun.

"Shall I play now?"

Alyse nodded, feeling the warm glow of the liquor in her veins.

He strode over to the piano, ran his fingers over the keys, swung into a dreamy lullaby.

Alyse closed her eyes, lay back her head.

The music poured into her soul, soothing, comforting, delightful.

She floated away; her imagination no longer checked, no longer hampered by consciousness of the reality of the world in which she lived and breathed.

The man played on and the girl reclined in luxuriant ecstasy on the divan, listening and dreaming.

The fire in the grate died to glowing embers.

Things that were material no longer existed.

This was a land of dreams and romance, of peace and deep contentment.

Alyse lay with her eyes closed for minutes after he had stopped playing.

And when at last she opened them he was sitting on the divan close beside her, looking into her face.

Involuntarily she started. It was over. The dream had ended.

This was reality.

She steeled herself for what was to come, regretful now that the beauty of the moment had passed that she, like dozens of others, had succumbed to this man's charms.

Looking at him it was not difficult to understand the reason.

He was truly a romantic figure; handsome, glamorous, possessed of all those artistic qualities that women seek in their men.

It was a pity, thought Alyse, that he lacked in those fundamentals which are, after all, the requisites of things that are worth striving for—love and happiness and a home.

He lived only for the hour, only for the thrill and sweet bliss of the momentary worship and surrender of beautiful women.

"Did you enjoy my playing?"

"Yes, it was gorgeous."

"I'm glad. You have a real appreciation of beauty."

Preliminaries! Flattery! Trickery! Alyse's heart began to pound.

She was afraid and regretful.

She prayed for the strength to resist him.

"It is a pity," Carthage was saying in his deep rich voice, "that the hour is late. That I can't play for you longer. I'd like nothing better."

"It is a long time since I have found a person with so deep a sense of understanding."

He stood up, glancing at his watch.

"Come. Shall we go?"

Alyse stared.

She wondered if it were not still a dream, if the thing could possibly be true.

Yes, there he was, standing at the foot of the divan, her wrap draped over his arm.

She stood up, allowed him to place the wrap about her shoulders, dazed, incredulous, conscious of a strange new emotion.

An emotion that defied explanation.

He led her to the door.

They descended to the street and stepped into the car that waited there.

They drove back through the city to Alyse's home. Sitting there, Alyse was still unbelieving.

Beside her Ross Carthage chatted amiably and wondered at her muteness.

Presently he suspected she had been disappointed in his playing, sensed that he had not pleased her.

The thought sobered him and he too felt silent.

There was a brief moment before Alyse's door.

She tried to thank him, struggled for words to express her gratitude, knowing only that she was making a mess of the thing, realizing that he didn't understand.

And when at last he had gone, she turned away, entered the dim hallway of her own apartment and sat down on a settee there for a moment or two to think.

She was striving to analyze the strange emotion that had gripped her the moment Ross Carthage had led her from his apartment.

And at length the answer came.

The emotion was that of disappointment. Disappointment not in his playing, but because the thing she had feared and dreaded, the thing for which she had scored and condemned this man, yet which she had expected and prepared for, had not happened.

Predicts Human Beings Will Stop Family Life

I see, says a writer in the American Magazine, that the head of the psychological laboratory of a famous eastern university has issued a statement in which he predicts that in a reasonable length of time the human being will be all through with family life. He won't need it any more, because he will not be an emotional creature. His intellectual processes will be all that is left of him and, being a creature purely intellectual, he won't love and marry and establish homes, nor be dependent on the comforts and kindnesses of home life. He will mate scientifically and the state will raise his children.

A lot of work will have to be done on old Adam, and his girl friend, Eve, before mankind will ever reach such a state. In fact, he won't be Adam any more, and it won't be the human race.

Portugal in the War

Germany declared war on Portugal March 9, 1916, following the seizure of German and Austrian ships in Portuguese ports, and other acts which Germany considered hostile.

The Portuguese contribution to the war was chiefly in the assistance it gave in the conquest of German East Africa, adjacent to the Portuguese colony of Mozambique. Some 60,000 Portuguese troops, however, served in France.

Lesson for February 25

THE TWELVE SENT FORTH

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 9:35-11:1. GOLDEN TEXT—Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth laborers into his harvest.—Matt. 9:37, 38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Twelve Workers for Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Win Others to Christ.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Why Win Others to Christ?

I. Jesus' Compassion for the Multitude (9:35-38).

As he went on his rounds preaching the gospel of the kingdom, he saw the multitude as sheep having no shepherd, and his sympathy for them was aroused. This moved him

1. To declare that the harvest was plenteous but the laborers were few (v. 37). He saw the whole needy world as a ripened field of grain ready to be harvested, with but few who were willing to labor in the harvest field.

2. To ask them to pray the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into the harvest (v. 38). Those whom he would send forth as laborers into his harvest field he desired to be imbued with the spirit of sympathy which would move them to pray for the thrusting forth of laborers.

II. The Laborers Chosen (10:1-4).

These twelve humble men were chosen and commissioned to carry forth the work of the propagation of the kingdom.

III. The Sending Forth of the Twelve (10:5-42).

The sending forth of the twelve shows the methods adopted by Jesus Christ in the propagation of the kingdom. It should be clearly borne in mind that this chapter does not outline the policy of missionary endeavor in the present age. In order to show the dispensational aspects of the lesson, the following divisions of the chapter are suggested:

1. Instructions bearing immediately upon the apostles' work to the death of Christ (vv. 5-15). Observe

a. The sphere of their mission (vv. 5, 6). They were to go only to the Jews. They had no message for Gentiles or even Samaritans. No such restriction obtains with reference to ministers today.

b. Their message (v. 7). "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." By this is meant the promised kingdom of Israel was at hand—Jesus Christ, the promised king, was present and ready to set up his kingdom. The Jews rejected and crucified him. In this time of his rejection the church is being selected from all the nations.

c. The supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 8). They were clothed with power to work miracles.

d. Their maintenance (vv. 9, 10). They were to make no provision for their support, but to depend wholly upon the Lord who sent them. Since they had received the message and power gratuitously, they were to give it out in the same way.

e. The responsibilities of those to whom the message was delivered (vv. 11-15). If the people would not receive them or hear their message they were to turn away and pronounce judgment upon them.

2. Instructions concerning the testimony from the day of Pentecost onward (vv. 16-23). After Pentecost testimony for Christ would be fraught with great danger. Both Jews and Gentiles would assail the messengers with the most bitter persecutions. How appalling this has been fulfilled! Christ's witnesses have been scourged in the synagogues before heathen magistrates. Instead of bringing peace to the homes, Christ's witnesses have brought divisions of the fiercest kind among many families. In their defense the missionaries were to rely upon the Holy Spirit to aid them. These conditions were literally experienced in the period from Pentecost to the destruction of Jerusalem. Since the fall of Jerusalem no one has been scourged in a synagogue. Verse 23 seems to carry the work forward to the time of the preaching of the kingdom in the tribulation time. The Lord's coming is so speedy that their testimony is cut short.

3. The teaching applicable in all ages (vv. 24-42). The disciple has the position of oneness with the Master. He is, therefore, courageously to declare the whole counsel of God, though most violently opposed. Though their testimony results in bitter opposition, the messenger should not be surprised or discouraged, for so completely is the Lord identified with his disciples that he accepts treatment of them as treatment of himself.

Jesus the Master

When we read the New Testament, in the actual words of our Master, are we never startled to discover how exacting a Master he is? Never has there been a religious teacher who has made so great a demand upon human character as Christ.

Love

Love is heaven, and heaven is love. Whoever or whatever leads a man into that unselfish life, leads him to step forward in religion.

ANCIENT "HOARDERS"

All sorts of ancient beads cut to resemble an eye, found on the sites of old cities of Mesopotamia, are treasured by modern natives of the district as charms against every sickness and evil spell. It is difficult to obtain these charms, even at considerable price, says a returned traveler. Banded, semi-precious stones, such as agate and sardonyx, are prized as the most powerful. Natives of this region have been antique hoarders since ancient times.

Those Long Sermons!

Bobbie (in church)—Mamma, what will become of all those flowers on the altar?

Mamma—They will be given to those who are sick at the close of the service.

Make this lip test

LOOK at them . . . and your cheeks, too, without make-up. Do they possess the natural glow of health, which comes from a sufficiency of rich, red blood? If they do, make-up is simple . . . if they don't read on . . . you may find one of the reasons why your skin is not clear and rosy.

You cannot have red lips, rosy cheeks, energy and cheerfulness if your blood is in a run-down condition.

Lack of hemo-glo-bin, the red coloring of the blood, may also indicate a weakened condition of the body . . . loss of strength . . . poor appetite.

S.S.S. is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in restoring a low hemo-glo-bin content. If your condition suggests a blood tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon notice a pick-up in your appetite . . . your color and skin should improve with increased strength.

S.S.S. is sold by all drug stores in two sizes . . . the larger is more economical.

EMUS IN RUSSIA

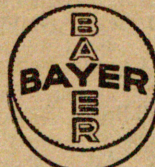

The Soviet authorities have started a scheme to "populate" the steppes of Russia with Australian emus. Preliminary experiments in this direction were begun under the first five-year plan, and they are now said to be satisfactory, the emu having shown that it can withstand the cold winters of Russia as far north as Moscow. The official report of the new scheme points out that the emu is a bird, with edible flesh and that its eggs contain from 600 to 700 grammes of nutritious food. For the moment, however, it is intended not to eat the eggs, but to use them for hatching, and special incubators have been constructed.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On a pure California Syrup of Figs. Parents are urged to use just the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. MARTIN MILLER CANDIDATE FOR STATE REP.

Martin K. Miller, one of the few prominent younger Republicans who actively and wholeheartedly supported the Republican party in the last presidential campaign, announced by filing his petition of candidacy at Springfield the past week that he will seek the Republican nomination for State representative of the 41st Senatorial District at the April primaries.

Mr. Miller who is identified with the younger and more progressive element of the Republican party, stated that he will campaign on a platform which includes the pledge that, if elected, he will use his influence to put into effect reforms in respect to consolidation of governmental agencies, relief to unemployed, school relief, saving on governmental expenditures and passage of an old age pension.

Mr. Miller was born in Illinois and received his early education in the public schools and high school of the City of Joliet. He attended the University of Illinois and Northwestern University and was graduated from the law school of Loyola University.

For the past four years Mr. Miller has actively practiced law in Joliet and is at the present time associated with former Judge Frederick A. Hill in the law firm of Hill and Miller of Joliet.

A spring booth festival, sponsored by the young people of the Joliet-Dixon Methodist district, will be held March 3rd in the Alpine building 314 Van Buren St., in Joliet.

On the main floor of the building local merchants of Joliet will display their wares in decorated booths. An exhibit of unusual quilts is expected to attract much attention among the womenfolk.

Seven Mistakes

Made In Corn-Hog Signup Papers

Seven common mistakes which Will county farmers are making in signing their corn-hog adjustment contracts will hold up the benefits from the plan unless they are guarded against more carefully during the remainder of the sign-up work, says Farm Adviser Leonard W. Braham.

Obviously all contract signers do not commit the same errors, nor does any one cooperater make all of them. However, an inspection of the 200 contracts, already signed in this county shows that great care must be taken when filling in the contract and work sheet and collecting supporting evidence.

"An oversight on the part of the signer may make it necessary to return the contract to the producer for correction, which causes delay in the county program and the eventual distribution of the corn and hog benefit payments to farmers," warns the district supervisor from the extension service of the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois, when cautioning sign-up committees to check each contract carefully. "Should an error slip the notice of the local corn-hog committees and not be discovered until it reaches the Washington AAA office, a delay of several weeks may result before the contract can be returned to the signer, the error corrected and the contract sent back to Washington."

The most common mistakes that should be guarded against are:

1—The producer forgets to sign his contract or his signature on the back of the contract does not tally with his name as printed on the front or he forgets to obtain the signature of his landlord, or some other person who should sign the contract.

2—Where another person signs for the producer but fails to give evidence of his authority to sign.

3—The division of reduction payments between the producer and his landlord is not on the same basis as the division of corn or hogs under the crop or stock share lease.

4—The signer, when making out his work sheet fails to make his total acreage balance. This is quite common where double cropping has taken place. A notation explaining the failure to balance the acreages should be made in the margin.

5—Producer fails to have two of his neighbor count the number of hogs he has on hand and certify to their investigation.

6—When filling in Table 5 of the work sheet, the producer who had brood sows on hand, December 1, 1931, and is now preparing them for market or has sold them, should make proper notation on his evidence sheet to account for these animals or his hog inventory will not balance. The same error occurs in the case of aged male hogs and stags.

7—Contract signer does not bring his supporting evidence with him

C. Y. O. NOTES

St. Mary's lost to St. Mary's Croation Monday night 13 to 15. The game was well played and was lost in the last seconds of play.

Tuesday night the "North-side" girls lost to St. Mary's Irish 9 to 3, after a hotly contested game. The girls were playing under a handicap due to the absence of Alice Horrass and Micky Wachter.

Hazel Miller who has been playing occasionally as a sub, gave a good account of herself, scoring Mokena's three points.

Last Thursday night the girls met Manhattan at Wilton Center and were defeated 4 to 3. Again one of our subs, Marcella Gable helped out by making the only field goal.

The boy's team split with Wilton Center Thursday night and lost their final league game to St. Mary's Irish 15 to 20, Monday night, though playing one of the best games of the season.

Sunday the boys play two games with St. Cyril's. The girls will meet a team to be decided on later, probably Orland or Palos Park. Games will start at two o'clock.

THE V. F. W. SPIRIT OF COMRADESHIP

Last in a series of articles on the aims and purposes of the V. F. W.

One of the basic principles of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S., and one of the first reasons for our existence is the spirit of comradeship.

The V. F. W. is composed of men who have served under the American flag on foreign soil or in hostile waters. There is a peculiar and very strong bond of fellowship between our members—a bond that was born amidst the hardships and experiences they have shared, and the dangers they have survived together.

Members of the V. F. W., in every state of the Union, in the Canal Zone, in the Philippines and in France has borne arms in the service of the United States. Our members come from the Army, the Navy and the Marine Corps.

The democracy of the V. F. W., exemplifies one of the cardinal principles of our organization—comradeship. And the spirit of comradeship which exists among men who have stood shoulder to shoulder against enemy bullets on the high seas or on land across the seas, makes possible a complete democracy within our organization where neither age, creed or previous service rank is important except as a matter of history. In the V. F. W., admirals and enlisted sailors, generals and privates, are "comrades," united in their common purpose of caring for disabled veterans, guarding the welfare of all veterans and watching over the widows and orphans of those former comrades who have been called before the great Commander-in-Chief.

The V. F. W., spirit of comradeship prevails throughout the entire organization. It reaches from member to member, from post to post, approximately three thousand V. F. W., service officers labor untiringly in behalf of the disabled comrades in their respective communities. They are constantly securing hospitalization and compensation for disabled veterans who are unfamiliar with the benefits that have been established in their behalf. The average veteran needs this help and advice to cope with the vast amount of red tape that is always identified with government procedure. As a result the V. F. W., is helping thousands of worthy veterans to obtain the benefits to which they are rightly entitled under the law.

Every post in the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States also maintains a relief fund from which emergency financial assistance is available for the care of disabled and needy veterans and their families. In a score of other ways, our organization extends to its own members, and to all overseas veterans, a warm and wholesome comradeship which endures and comforts in sorrow and trouble, and shares and rejoices in happiness and good fortune. The spirit of comradeship in the V. F. W., is being tested today as never before. We are thoroughly familiar with the difficulties which beset the path of the war veteran who tries to rehabilitate himself in civil life; we know the sacrifices he has made and the hardships he is now enduring; we believe that we are capable of making and that we have the right to make certain suggestions concerning the welfare of those veterans whose present need is the result, we maintain, either directly or indirectly of the sacrifices they have made in the time of war.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States believes that the responsibility for the care of the veteran belongs by every right of justice and honor to the United States federal government. The man who lost an arm or leg in the trenches of France, lost that arm or leg, not in defense of this community or any other state or community, but in defense of the United States as a whole.

The man who contracted tuberculosis or other chronic illness as a result of the exposure and physical hardship of his service in the navy or on the battlefield, sacrificed his health and his financial security, not in behalf of the city where he enlisted but in behalf of the United States of America.

The V. F. W., believes and is working for adequate relief for veterans suffering from injuries or diseases incurred in war service. We are seeking relief for the veterans of all wars who no longer are able to carry on alone. We are demanding relief for the widows and orphans of all wars. We are demanding the immediate cash payment of adjusted service certificates.

In conclusion, I should like to emphasize that the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States does not confine itself strictly to objectives that have to do with veteran problems exclusively. We are committed to the support of a three-fold program which comprises veteran rehabilitation, child welfare and Americanism. We realize that "comradeship", in the last analysis, must concern itself with those matters which make for an improved citizenship and for higher standards of loyalty to the community, the state, and to the nation.

Watch it bubble up, then drink it. You will be amazed at the almost instant relief.

It is called Alka-Seltzer because it makes a sparkling alkaline drink, and as it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid.

After trying many brands of medicines—so-called relief for gas, and all of them a failure, I gave up. By chance I tried Alka-Seltzer—I am more than satisfied. Geo. Bennett, New York, N. Y.

Dental Health

THE EXPECTANT MOTHER

It is unfortunate that few women realize the necessity for a thorough dental examination during pregnancy.

Decay of the teeth progresses very rapidly at this time, thus making it necessary for her to see a dentist at regular intervals in order to forestall serious dental disorders, which, in later months, may cause complications of a very serious nature.

A chronic toothache is nature's danger signal of trouble, and if it is not attended to, may develop into an acute or chronic abscess, necessitating removal thus endangering both mother and child.

All body and mental functions are highly sensitized in pregnancy, and any complications arising from an unhealthy mouth will only aggravate the mental condition, which is an unnecessary drain on the mother. This can be avoided by instituting proper dental treatment from the beginning.

In order to prevent or control extensive decay, prompt dental attention and a properly prescribed diet are necessary.

An insufficient diet leaves the mother robbed of vital elements necessary for her own health, because nature takes care of the child's food requirements first, at the expense of the mother.

Due to the dietary deficiency that exists, the teeth become susceptible

You wouldn't buy a horse and buggy...
THEN WHY USE ANCIENT HEATING METHODS
WHEN RATES FOR GAS ARE SO LOW?

Is your heating plant out of date—like the old-fashioned horse and buggy? Do you still put up with soot, dust, dirty ashes, and back-breaking furnace drudgery?

Why not get rid of all this mess and nuisance! Heat the modern way—with gas. Gas heat is as different as night is from day, from all other forms of heat. You have no furnace worries from one year to the next! Your house stays clean, because gas gives off no soot or dirt. You say good-bye to coal shovels and dirty ash buckets. And every hour, day and night, your house is kept at the correct temperature—automatically.

To prove that every home can afford to heat with gas, we'll install it at our expense . . . and remove it at our expense, if you don't like it.

Low rates—you invest nothing to try

Rates for heating homes with gas are now one-half of what they were in 1930-31.

And—you can try gas heat without one cent of investment! We will install a burner in your present furnace or boiler at our own expense. You pay only the rental on the equipment, which amounts to $3 a month in the average home. You try it for a month, two months, a year. And if within the year you find that you are not completely satisfied with gas, we will take it out at our expense and replace your former heating equipment in good workmanlike order. But—if you decide to keep gas heat—as we think you will—the rental you have paid applies on the purchase price of the equipment.

Act now!

YOUR GAS METER

You are proud of the accuracy of your fine watch. And rightly. It's an excellent precision instrument. Yet it is no more accurate than your gas meter. By official test made before meters are installed—and recurrent checks within specified periods—the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois attains in its meters as high standards of accuracy as the fine watchmaker who manufactured your pocket time-piece.

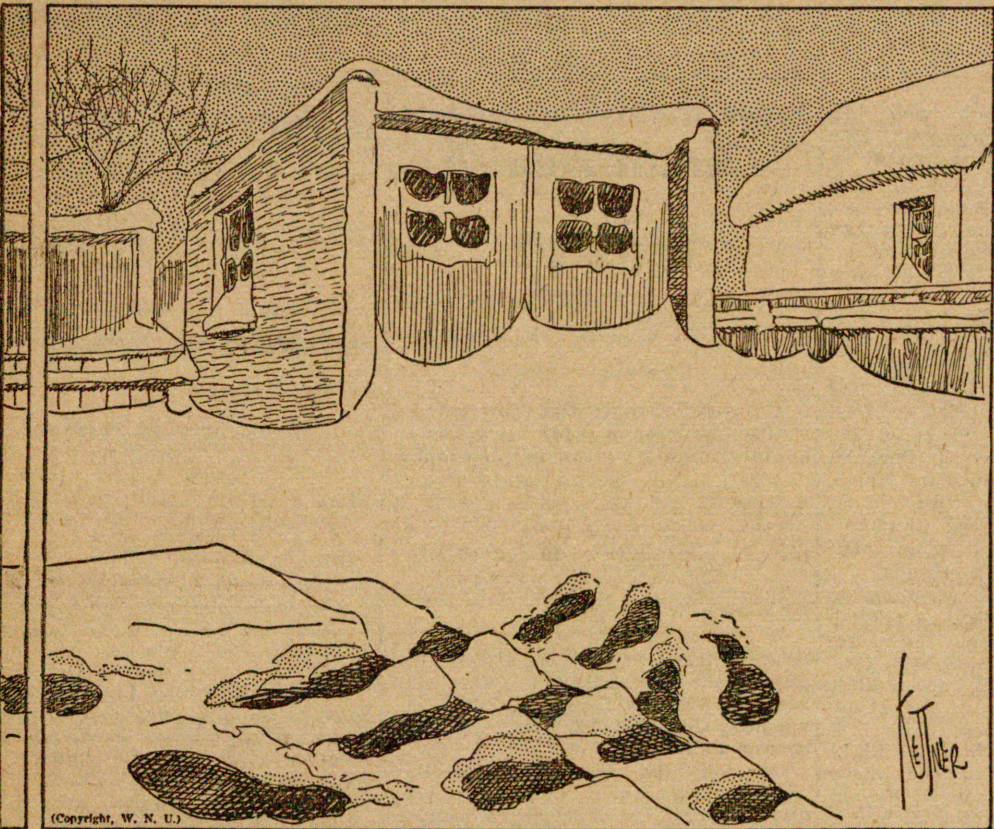

Before installation, every meter must pass the rigid test of official inspectors. In the Company's laboratories meters are checked according to specifications set up by the United States Bureau of Standards. A carefully measured volume of gas is passed through the meter and it is adjusted to exact accuracy.

Gas heat can be installed in your home without allowing the house to cool off

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Peter Cardigan, novelist, and amateur detective of some note, with Sergeant Kilday, begin the official investigation. Franklin, while waiting, had visitors, among them his mistress, "Choo Choo Train"; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody; her brother, Rylie; Daniel Bullis, politician, and a woman in a blue frock, who had quarreled openly with Franklin. Rylie Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with Choo Choo, despite his approaching marriage. Kilday accuses the dead man's keys. Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, is contradictory in her answers to questions, but the investigators learn nothing of importance. An interview with Bullis is also fruitless. Webster Spears admits informing Rylie Carmody of Franklin's relations with Choo Choo, for Doris Carmody's sake, in the hope of preventing the wedding. Fletcher, Franklin's manservant, is reticent. An interview with Milo Dunbar, Franklin's law partner, and search of the dead man's office, reveals nothing of importance. Choo Choo admits her relations with Franklin were to continue after his marriage. She says she was decoyed into visiting Franklin at the church by a telephone message from Fletcher, telling her to come.

"He had a key. I suppose it's there."

"Mind if I try it?" Choo Choo shrugged. "Nice of you to ask," she said. There was a trace of bitterness in her voice. "I've already told you he had a key. I'm not hiding anything."

"I just want to make sure," the detective retorted, over his shoulder, as he disappeared toward the living room.

When he returned, he nodded toward Peter. "It fits. That's six of them."

"You sound disappointed," observed Choo Choo.

"I had hoped that key would help me find some one else," the detective commented. "No matter. We'll play the hand just as it is dealt."

Peter frowned thoughtfully at his lean brown hands. "Miss Train," he put the question deliberately, "how did you feel about this marriage of Franklin's? You were in love with him, weren't you?"

Choo Choo moistened her lips, but did not reply. Her dark eyes returned his stare, but the shadows concealed their expression. Finally she nodded. "Yes, I loved him. What of it?"

"What did you think of this marriage?" Cardigan repeated.

Once more she lingered over her answer, her head bent now so that it was impossible to read the expression of her face.

"What does it matter what I thought?" the girl answered finally. "He was getting married, wasn't he? That's your answer."

"No," Peter wished that it were answer enough, and that he need no longer probe this girl's wound. He fortified himself with the memory of Jim Franklin's body, as he had last seen it in the rector's study. "No, that was his answer, Miss Train. I'm asking how you felt?"

"There are times," said the girl distinctly, "when your feelings don't count. I wasn't exactly happy over the marriage. You can't expect me to say that. Still," her glance faltered before the novelist's unwavering scrutiny, "I figured that I'd get over it. Other people have."

"Then when you left Franklin there in the study, you knew you were telling him good-by, for good, didn't you?" Kilday questioned for the first time.

"I didn't say that," the actress replied quickly. Then, noticing the unlighted cigar in the detective's hand. "Go on and smoke," she invited. "I need one myself." She fumbled on the table by the stand and found a cigarette. Cardigan held a match for her.

For a minute she puffed, deeply, as though keenly enjoying the smoke. Her glance traveled slowly, from one man to the other.

"What made you ask me that?" she inquired of Kilday, finally.

The sergeant shrugged. "He was getting married, wasn't he?"

A half-smile curled about the girl's lips, momentarily, and was gone, as quickly as it had come. "He was marrying a position," she said quickly. "Jim never loved Doris Carmody. He loved me."

"He did love you," Kilday conceded. "But that was finished, yesterday, wasn't it? By the wedding, I mean."

"The wedding," said the girl slowly, "wasn't going to make any difference between Jim and me. We had been all over that."

"You mean you were going on—the same as before?" The detective's tone was incredulous.

Choo Choo exhaled a cloud of smoke. "That's exactly what I mean," she declared. "For a detective, you can be terribly dense, sometimes."

"You can say that now," Kilday objected. "Franklin's dead."

"I'm only telling you what Jim and I had decided. The girl leaned forward angrily. "There's one thing you don't seem to understand. Jim loved me! He didn't love that Carmody girl."

"But he was marrying her," the sergeant declared, with finality.

"Marrying her!" Choo Choo tossed her head. "He wasn't marrying a girl. He was marrying a social position. Jim was going to be the next governor of New York."

Kilday could cope with the woman's anger, where her sorrow, a short time before, had silenced him. "And I suppose you were going to Albany with him, eh?"

"I wouldn't have been so far away," retorted the actress.

"If he loved you so much, why didn't he marry you?" the sergeant insisted.

"Don't be silly," the actress scoffed. "Where would Jim have been if he'd married an actress? Wouldn't the papers have had a good time on that? 'Candidate for Governor Marries Show Girl.' That would've been murder. It would have finished him."

"As it turned out," replied Kilday dryly, "it was murder anyway."

The girl shivered. "You're wasting time here," she said in a quieter voice. "Why don't you talk to Dan Bullis. Maybe he can tell you what happened yesterday afternoon. He was sore at Jim, and he'd been trying to see him. Bullis called me here, yesterday, wanting to see Jim. When I said he wasn't here, he swore. He said Jim was hiding from him, and that I was helping him. But he said he'd find him. If you really want to find who killed Jim Franklin, talk to Dan Bullis."

"We've talked to Bullis," Peter informed her quietly. "We've come here to find out what you know, Miss Train."

"I'm only telling you where to go if you want information about the murder," said the actress impatiently. "Do you think I'd kill the man I love? Dan Bullis is your man, I tell you."

"Jim Didn't Love Her—He Loved Me! Can't You Understand?"

"Yes, you've said that before," the novelist nodded. "We'll take care of Mr. Bullis. But some people don't think Franklin was killed by a man, Miss Train. They believe a woman killed him, and that the motive was jealousy."

"You're crazy!" Choo Choo stared at him angrily. "That means me, of course, and how do you figure I'd have done a thing like that? In the first place, I couldn't get away with it. Everybody knew how I felt about Jim. Even if I had wanted to, I wouldn't have tried that, because I'd have known this was the first place you would come."

"But you're overlooking a bigger bet than that. I loved him. Why would I murder the man I loved? That doesn't make sense."

"If you thought you were losing him, it would make sense, all right," Kilday interjected.

"But I've told you I wasn't losing him."

"Forget about the wedding for a minute," Cardigan invited. He rose and strode about the room aimlessly, but his eyes never left the woman who sat upon the bed.

"You've been reading these accounts of the murder," Cardigan indicated the newspapers beside the bed. "Did you notice anything there that sounded strange, Miss Train?"

"Plenty," replied the actress. "It looked like half of New York came around there to see Jim, just before the wedding. They make it sound like he was quarreling with all of them, too."

"Including yourself," said Kilday. "Yes," the actress admitted, "including me."

"It seems to me you have overlooked one of those callers," Peter continued. "I mean the woman in the blue dress."

Choo Choo looked at him through narrowed eyes. "Who was she?"

"That's what I'm asking you," said Peter.

She shrugged silk-clad shoulders. "How should I know? I didn't see anybody there in a blue dress."

"Nobody else knows who she was, either, Miss Train," declared the novelist. "We can't find anyone who ever saw her before. We only know that she was jealous of Jim Franklin—that she—"

"Jealous?" Then the actress leaned back, more calmly. "What is this? Are you trying to trick me, some way?"

Peter shook his head. "There's no trick to it," he replied simply. "Apparently, this was another woman that loved Franklin. She thought she had some claim on him, evidently. In fact," Peter was remembering the story Daniel Bullis had told of the scene in the study, "she threatened to ruin him, if he went ahead with the wedding. Are you still sure you don't know who that woman was?"

"Say!" Choo Choo was sitting erect, her eyes stormy. "Why don't you question her? If this is straight, she's the one you are looking for." Then she relaxed against the pillows. "But this isn't on the level." Her voice had gone flat. "If it was, you wouldn't be wasting your time here."

"Perhaps it isn't wasted," said Peter. "Perhaps you are the very person who can tell us where we may find this woman in blue."

The actress did not answer, but her eyes watched the novelist's, guardedly. "Suppose you have told us the truth, as far as you have gone," Peter continued. "Suppose you weren't jealous of Doris Carmody, and didn't care whether Franklin married her or not."

Choo Choo winced.

"Even granting that everything was just as you have said, that would not have kept you from being madly jealous of Franklin, if you had discovered there was still a third woman—this woman in blue—that he loved."

"But I tell you I didn't know there was such a woman," Choo Choo raised clenched hands above her head. "I still don't believe it. Jim wouldn't have done that to me. I loved him. And he loved me! Can't you understand? Me!" She beat her breast with her fists.

Peter waited quietly until the actress' storm of emotion had passed. "Perhaps," he suggested, "this other woman heard of you yesterday, for the first time. That being the case, she might have been the one who went to see Franklin, with vengeance in her heart."

There was hatred in the glance Choo Choo turned on him. "You're mighty sure there was another woman, aren't you?" was all she said.

In spite of his certainty that there had been another woman, and that she had played a dramatic, probably fatal, part in the slaying of Jim Franklin, Peter felt that he was making no headway. He had succeeded only in antagonizing a witness from which he had expected much assistance. Like every other trail they had followed, this, too, seemed to lead nowhere. And yet Choo Choo Train had been the last person, as far as they could determine, who had seen Franklin alive. According to the testimony of Nick Royce and Doctor Abernathy, she had been in the study with Jim Franklin after Daniel Bullis and the woman in blue had left. And her motive, too, was apparent, if she had known of the existence of that other woman. Or even if she hadn't, could he believe her statement that Franklin's wedding was to have made no difference in her relationship with him?

He wondered, too, at the woman's apparent lack of grief. To be sure, there were moments when she appeared grief-stricken. But they were only moments. She seemed to turn her emotions on and off, like a faucet, almost at will. Opposed to these arguments, of course, were Webster Spears' activities; Daniel Bullis' reticence concerning his conversation with Franklin; Rylie Carmody's efforts to halt the wedding; the suspicions aroused by Callis Shipley's movements, and, of course, the woman in blue, still unexplained and as mysterious as ever.

"Miss Train," the novelist inquired suddenly, "how well do you know Webster Spears?"

"Webster Spears? I've never heard of him."

"Are you sure a man by that name didn't telephone you yesterday?"

"If he had, I'd have heard of him." Choo Choo's manner was contemptuous. "Outside of Jim and Dan Bullis, the only man who phoned me yesterday was Fletcher," she declared. "I've already told you about that."

Peter frowned. "What was Franklin's number?" he demanded curtly.

She told him.

"Do you mind if we use your telephone?"

"Certainly not," Choo Choo handed him the instrument from the table at her bedside.

Fletcher answered the call.

"This is Peter Cardigan, Fletcher. I called there with Sergeant Kilday to ask you some questions last night, remember?"

"Yes, sir, I remember."

"I forgot to ask you about your telephone call to Miss Train, yesterday, Fletcher," Peter explained. "How did you happen to telephone her?"

"There must be some mistake, sir. I never telephoned Miss Train."

The novelist hesitated, his hand over the transmitter. "What time did you say you received that call, Miss Train?"

"It must have been about half past two," replied the actress.

"Think again," said Peter, into the telephone. "Didn't you call Miss Train about two-thirty yesterday afternoon?"

Fletcher's tone was positive. "I'm quite sure, sir. I have never telephoned Miss Train."

"Here, let me talk to him!" Sensing the tenor of the servant's replies from Peter's conversation, she snatched the instrument from the novelist's hand. "What did you say, Fletcher? You never called me! Don't be a fool, man!" She slammed the receiver in place and faced the two men.

"Just the same, he did call," she declared stormily. "He told me Jim wanted me to come to the church. I don't know why he should lie about it." (TO BE CONTINUED.)

BEAUTY TALKS

By

MARJORIE DUNCAN

CARE OF HANDS AND ARMS

IT WOULD be a very simple matter for every woman who uses a good skin food on face and neck (and every woman should, you know) to massage hands and arms too with a little of the cream. Notice the hands and arms of operators in beauty salons who give facial treatments—soft and smooth, aren't they? It is the constant contact with cream that does it.

Try this treatment. At night before retiring, wash hands and arms thoroughly with a good nail brush, bland soap and warm water. Rinse very thoroughly in warm and then in cold water. Dry with a soft towel. Next massage with a good-skin food or warm olive oil. Or you can make a cream, at home, using equal portions of olive oil, cocoa butter and lanolin. Melt the cocoa butter and lanolin in order to measure. Then pour the three ingredients into a clean container and stir to a creamy consistency.

When massaging the arms use a firm, rotary motion. Pay special attention to the elbows, massaging the left elbow with thumb and third finger of right hand and vice versa.

Leave a little of the cream on overnight to further soften the skin. Wear long cotton gloves, or cut the sleeves out of an old flannel nightgown, or use a clean, old pair of white stockings. This will avoid soiling bedclothes and at the same time give you full benefit of the creaming.

In the morning, pat quite briskly with a pad of cotton moistened with iced skin tonic, or use a little witch hazel for the purpose.

Massage the hands with the cream too, working round and round and then firmly downward as though putting on a new pair of gloves.

For bleaching the hands, dimming tan or freckles or removing fruit juice stains, keep a half lemon handy. This is excellent for discolored elbows too. Rub the lemon over entire hand and arm, or dig nails into it. Do this before massaging with cream and immediately after follow with the massage to counteract any drying effect of the lemon juice. Remember to wear gloves for household tasks as well as outdoors and to avoid harsh soaps and powders for washing dishes, scrubbing, etc.

For very quick action, if hands have been neglected and you wish them to look lovely at short notice, many readers have reported excellent results from the use of a ready-prepared hand jelly and whitener combination.

HOME MANICURE

PALE hands, pink-tipped, nails diligently cared for, add immeasurably to feminine charm, grace and good grooming.

Of course, it is best to have a weekly, or twice monthly manicure by a professional. This done, it is a very simple matter to keep the nails in perfect condition. Only a minute a day will be necessary to run an emory board over the outer edge, to push back the cuticle with a soft towel after washing the hands (this should be a habit) and to apply a bit of cuticle oil or nourishing cream along the nail bed. This decreases any danger of hangnails and makes it unnecessary to have the cuticle cut frequently. After massaging with the softening cream or oil, an orange wood stick should be used around the base of the nail to keep the cuticle shapely and free.

If you find it necessary to give yourself a complete manicure at home you will need: a file, emory board, orange wood stick, cotton, cuticle remover, polish, nail white if you wish, cuticle scissors and buffer. First, remove any remaining polish with a small piece of cotton moistened in the remover. Then file and shape the nails. Remember that the shape of the nails should conform with the shape of the fingers, slightly pointed for tapering fingers; rounded for the stubby fingertip; oval for the average. File from the sides to the center of the nail. Now use the emory board, rough side first and finish with fine side to insure a perfect finish.

Many of the finer beauty parlors then buff the nails with dry polish. This step may be included if you wish. The next step is soaking fingertips in hot, soapy water and softening the cuticle. Dry fingers thoroughly, each fingertip separately and gently push back the cuticle. If flesh under nail tip is badly discolored use a bleach. Equal parts of hydrogen peroxide, lemon juice and ammonia. Or powdered pumice and peroxide to make a paste for very stubborn discolorations. Work this back and forth with pointed edge of orange wood stick, wrapped in cotton.

One reason why hangnails form so soon after a manicure is the fact that very often the cuticle removers used are quite drying. The soap and water soaking also swells the cuticle. Faulty manicuring may be the cause of the hangnails. Make it a point to massage a little olive oil or cream into the cuticle and nail base every night for a few minutes and I am sure you will not be troubled by the hangnails.

Right Plates or Dishes for Soup

With the return to style of soup plates it is important for the home maker to be acquainted with the different kinds of soups best suited to being served in them, and in bouillon cups, also called soup cups. The very name, bouillon, indicates the kind of soup originally intended to be served in these cups. The word is French for a clear soup or a beef broth. Fashion decreed for some time that all varieties of soup should be served in these bouillon cups, but now there is a return to the more proper method, of serving the soup to the dishes.

The chief distinction in suitability of soups to serve in cups or in plates is their density. Clear soups, even though they may not be strained as is bouillon or consommé, but have some solid pieces of ingredients in them, are the sort to be served in cups. Cream soups and heavy soups such as chowders, oyster and other stew soups, etc., should be served in soup plates. When soup is in cups, there is the inference that they may be sipped as well as taken with spoons. Heavy soups cannot be so sipped, and there should be no hint in the way it is served that such an inconsistency is considered.

Serving thin soup in plates is not a faux pas. The first return of style in serving such soup in plates was when glass soup plates appeared. Clear soup showed off the beauty of the glass most advantageously, and was served in it. Therefore the young homemaker need not have both cups and soup plates, but may, with propriety, use soup plates for all soups. The same cannot be said any longer of bouillon cups.

Clear soups must be of sufficient strength to make the watery liquid full flavored. Meat is the recognized essence to be imparted. Chicken, lamb, and beef broth are delicate and delicious when properly made. The fresh meat, of whichever kind, is covered with water brought to a boil and then allowed to simmer until the water has become rich in flavor from the meat juices. Salt and pepper are the condiments to use. If an onion is cooked in the water, no particles should remain in the soup when served. Also all fat should be skimmed off.

Consommé can be made from a combination of meats such as chicken and a ham bone, knuckle of veal and beef soup meat, etc. With the meat are boiled and simmered vegetables, such as celery, carrots, turnip; and the condiments of salt and pepper may be augmented with a very little mace and cloves, one blade of mace or one-eighth teaspoonful and four to six cloves are sufficient for four pounds of the combined meats and four quarts of cold water. Consommé is strained and may be clarified by straining through a cloth.

FRANKFORT

Word comes that Frank Lühring is improving nicely at Woodman, Colorado. The doctors say he will be fully restored to health.

The Frankfort public school has been quite free from scarlet fever cases this winter due to the excellent work of Dr. W. V. Hedges in promptly taking precautionary measures and fumigating the school rooms after the outbreak of one or two cases.

Tinley Junior Garden Club

In Memory of Mrs. Dini.
She slipped away—the dawn was new.

And the portals of heaven, through mists of blue
Were opened: while music from horns of gold
Welcomed her into the Shepherd's fold.

The angels smiled as she entered
there,
For she had been honest, just and fair.

And they knew her reward had come that day.
As she silently left us, and passed their way.

I like to think of her there above,
Tending a garden of heavenly love.
And letting a petal of memory dear
Sift through her fingers, back to us here.

To her the blue of heaven belongs,
To her the rapture of angel's song
And tho' our circle be incomplete
She has found her rest, at the Master's feet.

—Trudie Noehring Swisher

Mrs. Frank Baldwin entertained the Garden Club at her home on Thursday, Feb. 15th, nineteen members being present.

The house was prettily decorated for a Valentine Party.

The business meeting was opened with the roll call and then the minutes of the last meeting were read. Mrs. Elsie Koehler, secretary, also gave a history of Mrs. Dini's activities in the Garden Club. Mrs.

Swisher read the above poem in memory of Mrs. Dini.

Reports of committees were given
Mrs. Werth had prepared a sheet for each member for their memory books. These were read by every member and each verse seemed lovelier than the one before.

Mrs. Swisher read a paper on the primrose and Mrs. Wm. Funk on the outdoor living room, both being very interesting.

The program committee then took charge of the meeting.

Members were asked to draw hearts with their left hand and blind folded. There were some drawings which would require quite a stretch of the imagination to be recognized as hearts. Mrs. Wyman proved to be the best artist and received a prize.

Comic valentines fixed as jig-saw puzzles were then given to each one and Mrs. Nielsen was the first to get her's together. She also won a prize.

Then the hostess served delicious heart shaped cakes and coffee to the members.

Everyone enjoyed the delightful afternoon. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. George Hartman on Thursday, March 15.

MOKENA

Mrs. J. Grothendick underwent an operation for a ruptured appendix at the Silver Cross hospital Monday. She is reported to be getting along nicely.

August Hentsch had a narrow escape from serious injury when he fell down the cellar stairs at the Scheer place recently vacated by his son Albert. Mr. Hentsch was going down cellar to shut off the village water when he made a mistep and fell. A bunch of keys in his trouser pocket on the side on which he fell made a deep bruise on his leg. He is able to be about again.

Fire of unknown origin broke out in a garage on the premises of Judge John Schultz Saturday noon. The local fire department responded very promptly but the flames had made rapid headway and altho the fire was put out, the garage was rdined. The loss is total as Judge Schultz had no insurance on the building. Luckily the judge's car was not in the garage, but many valuable tools burned.
Plans are being made for holding a bunco party at St. Mary's hall on March 15th.

Rev. E. J. Moritz and a number of members of St. John's Brotherhood attended a big Brotherhood gathering at Peotone Tuesday evening.
